IMMIGRATION.

Several private letters, received by the late arrivals, state positively that the Government had determined to send five thousand emigrants to this colony immediately; but that in consequence of some of the details not having been settled, the matter had not been made public officially. Although this information comes from sources which are generally pretty correct, we fear that in this instance there has been some mistake. Emigration could not be carried on without money, and to the 1st July we cannot find that any vote for that purpose had been taken in the House of Commons. There is about £10,000, belonging to the colony, in the hands of the Colonial Agent, which was paid for special surveys, and it is possible that it may have been determined to spend that money in sending out labourers to the colony, and that Lord Stanley may have determined to send out a batch of his free convicts from the Parkhurst Prison; but we doubt whether there is any intention, for the present, of reviving emigration upon any systematic scale.

LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

Friday, October 20.

The SPEAKER took his seat shortly after the appointed hour, and so soon as there were sufficient members present to form a House the business proceeded.

COLONIAL DISTILLATION.

Mr. WINDEYER presented a petition (a copy of which appeared in the Herald a few days since) against the proposed abolition of colonial distillation. The petition had eleven hundred signatures attached to it, among which the names of the principal merchants and traders in Sydney appeared. In moving that the petition be read, Mr. Windeyer expressed his opinion that the abolition of colonial distillation would not have the effect of preventing the frauds practiced upon the revenue, while at the same time it would tend to discourage colonial industry, and would have a most injurious effect on a branch of industry which was likely to be of considerable importance—namely, wine growing.

Mr. WENTWORTH seconded the reading of the petition, maintaining that if the abolition of colonial distillation would not have the effect of preventing the enormous frauds on the revenue, the colonial manufacturers would at all events not be entitled to any differential duty in their favour. He thought that the high rate of duty was the principal cause of illicit distillation and other frauds perpetrated on the revenue, and it was only by reducing these duties and making them alike on all spirits, whether foreign or colonial, that such frauds could be prevented.

The petition was read and ordered to be received.

A conversation ensued, which was stopped by the Speaker as irregular; and on the understanding that the whole matter connected with the petition would be fully investigated when the measure which the Government proposed to introduce should be before the House, the subject was dropped.

PORT ESSINGTON.

Dr. NICHOLSON, as Chairman of the Select Committee appointed to enquire into the best way of establishing an overland route to Port Essington, presented the report of that Committee, which was ordered to be printed.

INSOLVENT LAW.

Dr. NICHOLSON begged to ask the Colonial Secretary whether it was the intention of the Government to introduce any measure with a view to amend the Insolvent Act during the present session.

The COLONIAL SECRETARY said, he had already had occasion to answer the same question, as it had been put by another honorable member. He would repeat, however, that it was not the intention of the Government to introduce any measure in any way affecting the principle of the Insolvent Act. A measure was in course of preparation which had for its object to regulate the receipt and appropriation of fees in the Insolvent Court, and also to provide for the making of rules of Court, &c.; this Bill had been rendered necessary by a despatch which had been received from the Secretary of State, but it was not intended in any way to touch the principle of the law.

The ATTORNEY-GENERAL said, he had been prevented by circumstances from presenting to the House the Bill which the Government intended to introduce on the subject. He hoped to do so on Tuesday next, and at the second reading, if the honorable member thought it deficient in any respect, he would have an opportunity of moving amendments.

DISTRICT COUNCILS—CAMPBELLTOWN AND APPIN.

Mr. BOWMAN presented to the House the Bill to separate Campbelltown and Appin from Camden, Narellan, and Picton, and to erect them into a separate Council. He stated that he did not apprehend there would be any opposition to the measure, as it had been agreed by all parties that the proposed partition was desirable. The Bill was in its present form a very lengthy one, but it would be for the Council, at its second reading, to dispense with any of those clauses which might be considered unnecessary.

The Bill was read a first time.

Some conversation ensued as to the propriety of printing the whole of the Bill; it appeared that it related, not only to the objects set forth by Mr. Bowman, but also to the mode of election, filling up vacancies, &c.; but it was ordered that the Bill be printed.

Mr. BOWMAN gave notice, that so soon as the Bill was printed, he should move for the second reading.

ADJOURNMENT OF THE HOUSE.

Mr. ELWIN moved, that on the rising of the House, the House do adjourn to three o'clock on Tuesday next.

This motion was seconded and carried without remark.

STANDING ORDERS.

Mr. THERRY gave notice, that on Friday next he should move that the House resolve itself into a Committee of the whole House, upon the Standing Orders, in order to receive and consider the report of the Select Committee thereon.

PUNCTUALITY.

The SPEAKER complained that honorable members were not punctual in their attendance. Three o'clock had been fixed as the hour of meeting, and he had given his casting vote for that hour in the hope that it would meet the convenience of honorable members, who for the greater portion of the previous part of the day were occupied elsewhere. Instead, however, of assembling at three o'clock, and proceeding to the dispatch of business, it frequently happened that there were not sufficient members present to constitute a House even at half-past three. He hoped this would not occur again, but he should feel it his duty in future, if there was not a House at half-past three, to adjourn.

On the motion of the COLONIAL SECRETARY the House resolved itself into a Committee on the ESTIMATES.

Mr. ELWIN in the chair.

The COLONIAL SECRETARY called the attention of the Committee to an item which had been passed over last night for want of information, namely, the sum of £137 for travelling expenses for bailiffs summoning witnesses. Mr. Vannett, one of the clerks in the Sheriff's department, was in attendance, and he would move that he be called in.

Mr. Vannett was called in, and explained that this sum of money was divided among bailiffs, at Sydney, Parramatta, Maitland, Bathurst, Berrima, Campbelltown, Liverpool and Windsor, to meet the expenses they were put to in summoning the jurors either for Supreme Court, or for Quarter Sessions. The bailiff in Sydney had to go over a circuit of eight miles around the city to summon jurors for the Supreme Court, and four miles for jurors for Quarter Sessions. The bailiffs in the country districts had a much larger extent of country to go over, and the allowance was not sufficient to meet the expense. Nothing would be wanted for Liverpool or Windsor, if it were intended to do away with the Quarter Sessions there.

The witness having withdrawn,

The sum of £137, was, on the motion of the COLONIAL SECRETARY, reduced to £101, and voted.

The Estimate of £1,750 for allowances to Witnesses at Assizes and Quarter Sessions, was, on the motion of the COLONIAL SECRETARY, reduced to £1,320, which sum was voted.

The sum of £910, for allowances to Jurors, was voted without opposition, the Colonial Secretary merely expressing a hope that by the next year the law would be altered so as to admit of a considerable reduction in this item.

The sum of £187 was voted for Witnesses at Port Phillip, being a reduction on the Estimate in the same proportion as the other.

The sum of £60 was voted for allowances to Jurors at Port Phillip.

COURTS OF REQUESTS.

The COLONIAL SECRETARY said, the next Estimate was for the establishment of Courts of Requests, and the first item in this estimate was £1000 for the salary of the Commissioner. Honorable members would be aware that this was an increase on the salary at present received by his honorable and learned friend who held the office; but the proposal of an increase arose from a change in the state of circumstances now and at the time the appointment was made. During the last session of the late Legislative Council an Act had been passed by which, so soon as it was brought into operation, the jurisdiction of the Court would be extended from £10 to £30. His honorable and learned friend had now filled the office for a period extending over fourteen years, during which time his decisions had given universal satisfaction to the suitors in the Court, and to the public generally. His honorable friend's efficiency was so universally admitted, that he should not say one word more on the subject. The contemplated extension of jurisdiction would incur a great additional degree of responsibility and additional labour, and he thought the proposed increase of salary fully warranted under these circumstances; and His Excellency the Governor and the late Legislative Council had fully and expressly recognised the claim which his honorable and learned friend would have to an increased salary under these circumstances; and the Secretary of State, in contemplation of the proposed changes in the jurisdiction of the Court of Requests, and of the increase of salary consequent thereon, had confirmed another gentleman in the office of Solicitor-General, which otherwise would have been offered to his honorable and learned friend: and this was clearly to be inferred from the Secretary of State's despatch on the subject. He was aware that there was some difference of opinion as to whether benefit would arise from the carrying into operation of the Act passed by the late Council; but the only objections he had heard to the measure were legal objections: the public generally were most anxious for it, and it had been universally considered that its effect would be to decrease litigation, and also to save very considerable expense to those who were obliged to go to law. At all events, it was only fair that the Act should have the benefit of an experiment. It was proposed to confine its operations to Cumberland at first, and afterwards, if found beneficial, to extend them. He would not detain the Committee longer, but in moving that £1000 be voted to defray the salary of the Commissioner, would strongly press upon the Committee the claims which his honorable and learned friend had upon them and the country.

The ATTORNEY-GENERAL seconded the motion.

Mr. WENTWORTH said, that if he understood the honorable and learned member for Camden aright, that honorable member had said the other night, that he should be as well, nay better pleased, if the extended jurisdiction were not forced upon him, and if there was no extended jurisdiction there could be no reason for giving an increased salary. And he did fear that the extended jurisdiction which was proposed to be given to the Court of Requests would not afford general satisfaction when the experiment was tried. He was himself of opinion that the public might derive great advantages from a summary jurisdiction being established in the Supreme Court, to the extent of £50 or even £60: such jurisdiction, however, being invested in the Judges of the Supreme Court, so that not only the county of Cumberland, but the whole of the districts where the Judges held their Courts, would have the benefit of such jurisdiction. He thought this would give more satisfaction in the end, because, as must be well known to all who had been suitors or defendants in a court of law, parties having recourse to such courts were always anxious to get the best law they could, and to have their disputes settled by the highest authority; one Judge of the Supreme Court was often not enough to satisfy suitors, and they had the opinions and decisions of two or three Judges. And as the honorable and learned member for Camden appeared perfectly indifferent about the matter, he thought that this Committee ought to set their faces against establishing an increased jurisdiction in the Court of Requests at an increased expense, the effect of which might very probably not give satisfaction to the public at large. He made these observations, however, under the impression that the suggestions which had been made by Mr. Justice Stephen as to the propriety of conferring this summary jurisdiction on the Supreme Court would be attended to; if, however, this suggestion was not attended to, and it was therefore deemed necessary to give an extended jurisdiction to the Court of Requests, he could not see why an increased salary should also be given. The Commissioner of the Court of Requests in Van Diemen's Land, where the jurisdiction was the same as that proposed to be conferred on the Court here, was content with a salary of £800; and moreover, as the jurisdiction, and the duties consequently, were to be confined to the County of Cumberland, the honorable and learned member would be relieved from the necessity of going to Bathurst and other distant places where he had formerly to hold Courts, so that he, Mr. Wentworth, did not think that there would be an increase of labour, but rather a decrease. In conclusion, he should object to any increase, unless the course which he had formerly suggested, and which he proposed, was adopted, namely, that of uniting the offices of Chairman of the Court of Quarter Sessions with that of Chairman of the Court of Requests. If this plan were adopted, the Chairman would undoubtedly be entitled to a higher remuneration, but at present he must move that the salary of the Chairman of the Court of Requests be £800 instead of £1000, as proposed by the Colonial Secretary.

Mr. WINDEYER seconded the motion.

Mr. BOWMAN opposed any reduction in the amount proposed by the Colonial Secretary. He bore testimony to the efficiency with which the honorable and learned member for Camden had for many years past conducted the business of the Court of Requests, and to the universal satisfaction which his decisions had given. Moreover, he thought that the increase of jurisdiction would be highly beneficial to the colony generally, and he was aware that many were anxiously awaiting the bringing into operation of the Act of the late Council, in order to prosecute suits which the expense which it would be necessary to incur in the Supreme Court had prevented them from doing. He thought that an officer requiring such high legal attainments as would be required by the Chairman of that Court, and undertaking such arduous duties and responsibilities, ought to be well paid, and although he should himself be glad to see the operation of the Act extended beyond the County of Cumberland, he did not think that the Chairman of the Court for the County of Cumberland alone would be overpaid at £1000 a-year.

Mr. THERRY said that he had some few words to say, merely in explanation, and not at all as taking an active part in the discussion, as he did not think it would be becoming in him to do so, or to vote at all upon the question. He had nothing to complain of as to the manner in which the honorable and learned member for Sydney had introduced his amendment; and with respect to what he had said as to his, Mr. Therry's, personal wishes, he was perfectly correct. He, Mr. Therry, had no personal wishes whatever in the matter, and he should be quite satisfied to remain with the same duties he had now to perform, at the same salary he was now receiving. For thirteen years past he had held his present situation; as he had explained the other night, when he first came here, the duties were confined to the county of Cumberland, and the number of cases in the county averaged two hundred per month; at present they averaged more than one thousand in Sydney alone. Some years after his arrival, a necessity arose for holding courts beyond the county of Cumberland, and as, from the manner in which the Act of Parliament was framed, no person could hold such courts except a Commissioner appointed by Her Majesty, and as there was no other Commissioner so appointed, it was suggested to him that he should hold those courts. He urged at the time, that it was scarcely fair to impose an additional duty without additional remuneration, but he performed the whole duties at the same salary. The last Session but one of the Legislative Council, a petition was presented from five hundred and upwards of the merchants and traders of Sydney, praying for an extension of the jurisdiction of the Court of Requests, and the petition was supported by every member of the Council. All that he had to do with the measure was, to bring to its bearing that knowledge and experience of the wants of the colonists which he had acquired during his long connexion with the Court of Requests. He perused all Acts regulating Courts of Requests at home, and culled and selected clauses, and added others, such as he thought the circumstances of the colony required. The Bill was passed: the jurisdiction of the Chairman as to £10 cases remaining as before; above £10, the Chairman being assisted by two assessors taken from amongst persons qualified to act as special jurors. He confessed that he now, even with the assistance which he should receive from such assessors, almost trembled at the responsibility of the office, and honorable members would acquit him of any wish to create the office from a desire of personal advancement, when he stated that he had more than once refused the highest office and honour which could be offered to him. He would, in conclusion, put it to the feeling, to the honour and justice of the Committee, whether they would expect him, considering the increase of population, the vast increase of the duties of the Court over which he now presided, to undertake still more arduous, more responsible duties than he already discharged, for the same salary as that which he enjoyed fourteen years ago, when he first arrived here, and when the duties of the office were five times less than they were even at present—considering too that his whole time would be occupied, and that His Honor the Chief Justice had declared, that any person who filled the office would be fully occupied, and ought to receive at least £1500 a-year—while the general opinion of members of the late Council was, that it should be at east £1200 a-year. He would say nothing more, but should be prepared to give any explanation which honorable members might require.

Dr. NICHOLSON said that he had much pleasure in supporting the motion of the Colonial Secretary. It might indeed be urged that by the proposed reduction a saving of £200 would be effected to the general revenue; but by the extension of the jurisdiction of the Court of Requests a saving of many thousands would be effected for the colonists—they would be no longer subjected to the extortions practised under the authority of the law: and he thought that the Act passed by the late legislature was likely to prove very beneficial to the colony at large, and the officer who was to carry out the provisions of that Act richly merited the augmentation which was proposed to his salary. His station would be similar to that of one of the Judges of the Supreme Court, and his allowance should be nearly equal also. It was too late now to say that equal benefit might be afforded to the public by a different arrangement from that hitherto pursued in the Supreme Court; if it could be so, it should have been done long ago. Dr. Nicholson concluded by bearing the highest testimony to the manner in which Mr. Therry had conducted the department, and by stating his opinion that £1000 per annum was not at all too high a salary.

Dr. LANG concurred in all that had fallen from the honorable member for Port Phillip; and although he admitted the necessity of reduction wherever reduction was found practicable, he thought that in this case the advantages which would be derived by the public would be far greater than any saving of £200 to the general revenue.

Mr. WINDEYER supported the amendment proposed by Mr. Wentworth. He denied that the attorneys were extortioners, as they had been termed; and having looked through some bills of costs, he found that out of one charge of £18, no less than £7 was money paid out of the attorney's pocket. With respect to the approximation to the situation of Judge, he denied that the office of Chairman of Court of Requests, even with the extended jurisdiction, could be at all compared to it; and this argument sounded strangely on the other side, when it was known that the Governor had refused to listen to the suggestion of their Honors the Judges for the appointment of a fourth Judge, on the ground of the great expense. He thought that the Old Council had taken the same view of the matter as honorable members now appeared to take; they had the honorable member for Camden in their eye, and they did not reflect that the county would not always have him to superintend the department. He (Mr. Windeyer) considered, however, that £800 a year was quite sufficient. He did not think that there would be any decrease of litigation; on the contrary, he thought that a great many people who did not go to law now, would do so when increased facilities were afforded them. He thought, too, that it was objectionable, as it would afford a great scope to perjury, both plaintiff and defendant being admissible as witnesses in their own case. Nor did he think that much advantage would be derived from assessors; for himself, he would as soon have any case in which he was concerned tried by the honorable member alone, as with the assistance of assessors. After some further remarks, the honorable member concluded by supporting the amendment.

Mr. BERRY supported the original motion of the Colonial Secretary.

Mr. PANTON also gave his support to the original motion.

After some few observations from the Attorney-General, the question was put on the amendment, when a division was called for, and the result was:—

Noes	20
Ayes	4
Majority against the amendment	16

The original motion for £1000 a year was accordingly carried.

The estimate for the salary of Registrar was reduced from £100 to £350, being an addition of £30 to the salary at present received.

The sum of £220 was voted to defray the salaries of four Registrars in the country, two at £80, and two £30 each.

The salaries of the two clerks in Sydney were fixed at £185 and £140 respectively.

The COLONIAL SECRETARY moved that the sum of £465 might be voted for the salaries of nine bailiffs of the Courts of Requests—namely, one at £100, two at £75 two at £50, one at £40, and three at £25 each per annum.

Mr. THERRY explained the duties of the bailiffs, whom he considered to be very heavily worked, and by no means too well paid. The fees received by these bailiffs were trifling, the largest portion of such fees being the sum of four shillings per diem in the shape of possession money, for which sum they were compelled to leave a man in charge of such property as they levied upon from time to time.

Mr. WENTWORTH considered that in times like the present one half of these fees must be clear profit; and the emoluments of the bailiffs from this, and other sources, must consequently be very considerable.

The COLONIAL SECRETARY said, that the total expense of the Courts of Requests throughout the colony, in 1842, was £5102 16s., and the total amount of revenue derived from the department was £4938 10s. Before the establishment of the new Courts, however, the amount of expenses was £3033 14s., and the receipts, as before named, £4938 10s., giving an excess of revenue of £ 904 16s. 2d. The former statement, therefore, could hardly be considered as a fair one: inasmuch as it included no estimate of revenue derivable from the new courts before alluded to. The fees of these courts were much increased of late, in consequence of the number of cases brought before them through the depressed state of the times; but the revenue derivable from this source was formerly much less, and would, it was to be hoped, be again reduced as times improved. He admitted, however, that the fees chargeable in cases coming before this court were somewhat too high, and that it was by no means desirable to make these cases a source of revenue.

After some further discussion, Mr. WENTWORTH moved, as an amendment, that the sum of £440 might be voted, being a reduction of the salary of £75, attached to the Assistant Bailiff at Sydney, to £50.

The amendment was then put, and carried.

The sum of £32 was voted for the salary of a Messenger, without opposition.

The COLONIAL SECRETARY moved that the sum of £200 might be voted to defray the travelling expenses of the Commissioner; explaining, that the allowance was 40s. per diem during the time he was engaged in travelling in the performance of his duty.

Mr. WINDEYER said, that if these travelling expenses were allowed, the actual increase of the Commissioner's salary would be £400; for it must be borne in mind that although he had been equally compelled to travel when his salary was only £800, he was not then allowed any fees in addition to such salary.

Mr. THERRY explained that the allowance would not in all probability amount to near so much as had been placed for it on the Estimates, inasmuch as he should only receive it when actually engaged in travelling upon the public service.

Mr. WENTWORTH opposed the vote on similar grounds to those mentioned by the honorable member for Durham.

Mr. WALKER also opposed the motion, considering that the travelling expenses of the Commissioner had not been increased by the change in his duties, and that the addition to those duties would be sufficiently remunerated by the increase of his salary from £800 to £1000.

The ATTORNEY-GENERAL considered, that if the Council refused to vote the allowance, they would virtually reduce the salary which had been acceded to the Commissioner by so large a majority; and taking into consideration the fact that the Commissioner would be compelled by his increased duties to discontinue the practice of his profession as a barrister, that salary could scarcely be thought too much.

After some further conversation, in the course of which the proposition was supported by Messrs Bowman and Panton, and opposed by Dr. Lang, the Council divided upon it, when there appeared to be eleven on each side.

The CHAIRMAN said, that in consequence of the votes upon this motion having been equal, it became his disagreeable duty to decide it by a casting vote; and as the present was the first occasion of this description, he would beg leave to state the principle on which he should act. He apprehended that when the Chairman of a legislative body was called upon to decide a question in this manner, it was the practice of Parliament that he should do so, not in accordance with his own private opinion, but with certain rules bearing upon the point at issue. For instance, when the division in the House of Commons as to the impeachment of Lord Melville was equal, the Speaker gave his casting vote in favour of that impeachment, considering, without reference to any private opinion, that when so large a number as a moiety of the whole House deemed such an enquiry necessary, it was but right that it should be made. In questions like the present, where the point at issue was the imposition of a tax or burthen upon the public, it was the duty, he thought, of the Chairman to vote against the imposition of that burthen; and as the present motion must be regarded in something of that light, he felt proud to give his vote against it.

The next item, which was an allowance of £10 to a crier, was struck out, upon the motion of the Colonial Secretary; and the charge of £120 for postage and incidental expenses having been reduced to £80, was voted without discussion.

The COLONIAL SECRETARY then proposed that the sum of £850 might be voted for the salaries of fifteen Commissioners of Courts of Requests in the country districts.

Mr. WINDEYER enquired as to whom the appointments of country Commissioners were generally conferred upon.

The COLONIAL SECRETARY replied that the whole of these Commissioners were Police Magistrates.

Mr. WINDEYER suggested that it would be better to postpone the further consideration of this portion of the estimate until the Police Department should have been disposed of, for as it was very possible that a great number of these gentlemen might be dispensed with, it would be useless to vote the salaries of the Commissioners until this point was determined.

The COLONIAL SECRETARY acceded to this suggestion, and the remaining items relative to the Courts of Requests were accordingly postponed.

The COLONIAL SECRETARY said that the next item upon the Estimates was the Department of the Coroners; and as this could scarcely be said to form a part of the Establishment for the Administration of Justice, he proposed to take a distinct vote for the whole sum, and place it in the Appropriation Bill as a separate Department, thus placing it beyond the operation of the schedule having reference to the Judicial Establishments.

Mr. EBDEN suggested an increase in the salary of the Commissioner of the Court of Requests at Melbourne, who, although a barrister, and having very extensive duties to perform, received but £100 a year. After a brief conversation, however, this subject was dropped, the further consideration of the department to which it bore reference having been postponed.

Upon the sum of £100 having been moved, as the salary of the Coroner of Sydney.

Dr. NICHOLSON remarked, that no salaries should, in his opinion, be allotted to Coroners greater than the fees which they received upon every inquest, and thought that the duty might be very well performed by the Police Magistrates. There were no salaried Coroners in Scotland, and he believed that crimes escaped as little undetected in that country as in New South Wales.

The ATTORNEY-GENERAL stated, that the number of inquests, from September, 1841, to September, 1842, was 428, throughout the whole of this colony.

Major WENTWORTH remarked, that the duties of Coroner in Van Diemen's Land were discharged by the Police Magistrates, who received the usual fees for so doing, but no additional salary.

The ATTORNEY GENERAL enquired what salary these officers got.

Major WENTWORTH replied that his own salary was £400 per annum, but that of the other Police Magistrate was only £300. The fee upon each inquest was two guineas, but out of this sum the Coroners had to pay all the expenses of clerks, stationery, &c. In addition to their other duties, the Police Magistrates of Van Diemen's Land also acted as Commissioners of the Courts of Requests and Chairmen of Quarter Sessions.

Mr. WENTWORTH thought that the Coroner for Sydney was the only one in the colony who ought not to have a salary, inasmuch as the fees alone upon the number of inquests in that district was a sufficient remuneration.

The Council then divided upon the motion, when six appeared for it, and twelve against it. The salary of the Coroner for Sydney was therefore struck out.

The sum of £240 for the salary of six other Coroners, at £40 each, was voted without opposition.

Upon the motion for the sum of £64 1s., as the salary of the Clerk to the Coroner of Sydney, a question arose as to whether the Coroner ought not to take the depositions himself, and thus dispense with the services of the Clerk altogether. It was ultimately determined, upon the motion of the Colonial Secretary, that the further consideration of the department of Coroners should be postponed, in order that further information might be acquired.

The House then resumed its sittings, and the Chairman having reported progress, obtained leave to sit again on Tuesday next.

POSTPONEMENT.

The further consideration of the Postage Act Amendment Bill was postponed till Thursday next.

SOLVENT DEBTORS' BILL.

The House then resolved itself into Committee for the consideration of the Governor's Message relative to certain alterations in the above Bill, and the first alteration recommended in that Message, by His Excellency, was adopted without discussion. The second recommendation was for the omission of that portion of the Bill which provided that in all cases of the description therein referred to the Sheriff's fees should be only one-fourth of the usual amount: and upon this point a good deal of desultory conversation took place, a majority of the members being of opinion that the assets in those estates would be too much reduced if the whole amount of fees were allowed to be charged. The Committee at length divided upon the question, when there appeared 4 in favour of the Governor's amendment, and 10 against it. The House then resumed its sittings; and the Chairman having reported progress, obtained leave to sit again on Thursday next.

POSTPONEMENTS.

The second reading of the Sheriff Bill, and the further consideration of the maintenance of Light Houses Bill, were postponed till Tuesday next.

The consideration of the Governor's Message relative to Covicts in Colonial Gaols, was postponed till Friday.

The consideration of the Governor's Message relative to the Expenses of the Judicial Establishments, was postponed till Friday next.

The consideration of the Governor's Message relative to Police Expenses, was postponed till Tuesday next.

THE BASIN AT WOLLONGONG.

Mr. WINDEYER referred to the motion given notice of by the honorable and learned member for Camden, for taking into consideration the Petition from Illawarra relating to the Basin in the course of formation at Wollongong. The object of this motion, he presumed, was to obtain a grant of money; and it would be necessary that the proposition should, in the first instance, have the sanction of the Executive, as no vote could be passed of this description unless the subject was brought before the House by the Government.

Mr. THERRY said, that the sum required would be small, and the work was one of very great importance. He had thought, therefore, that by passing a resolution in that House, recommending such a sum, the Governor might feel himself fortified in the desire of granting such aid

Mr. WINDEYER said, that the passing of such a vote, even if practicable, without a previous recommendation on the part of the Government, would form a very bad precedent, as they would very speedily have applications of a similar nature from all quarters.

Mr. THERRY expressed a hope that the Government would place some sum among the estimates for public works for this service.

After some further conversation the subject was dropped, and the Council adjourned, at a quarter past nine, till three o'clock, P.M., on Tuesday next.

SUPREME COURT—COUNCIL PAPERS.

The following correspondence was laid upon the table of the Council by the Colonial Secretary, yesterday, and ordered to be entered upon the minutes of the Council.

To His Excellency the Governor.

Supreme Court, August 17, 1843.

Sir,—We have the honor to acknowledge the receipt, on the 12th June last, of the Colonial Secretary's letter of that date addressed by His Excellency's command to the Chief Justice, transmitting a copy of Lord Stanley's dispatch of 15th December, 1842, on the subject of the Judicial and Legal establishments.

With respect to the office of Prothonotary, and the arrangements connected therewith, and the office of Registrar of Deeds, to which subject we confine the present letter, we cannot concur with your Excellency in opinion that Lord Stanley intended the Prothonotary to be substituted for the Chief Clerk; but, had such been his Lordship's intention, it could not be effectuated—certainly not in the present state of business, of which we anticipate little if any diminution—without leaving some of the most important branches of duty unperformed, and the offices of the Court generally in a state of utter inefficiency. A slight glance at the nature and extent of the duties devolved on the Registrar and Chief Clerk, irrespective entirely of those entrusted hitherto to the former, as Registrar of Deeds, will be sufficient to establish this position. We perceive, however, nothing in the Secretary of State's dispatch to justify us in supposing that he meant more than to consolidate the offices of "Prothonotary and Registrar," by which title, indeed, his Lordship distinctly speaks of this officer.

Your Excellency observes, that to effect the contemplated separation of the "office of Registrar" from the Supreme Court, an Act of Council is necessary; but, if we are to understand your Excellency as proposing a disjunction of the office of Registrar of the Court, instead merely of a disunion of the duties of Registrar of Deeds, from those properly or usually belonging to the former office, we are aware of no ground or reason for effecting such a separation. The duty of registering deeds was entrusted to our Registrar, originally, as a temporary measure of economy; but, between his duties as Registrar, and those of registrar of deeds, there is no necessary or close affinity, and the union of the two in one office, and one officer, has been attended at least with the inconvenience of confounding things in their nature and consequences essentially different. One class of instruments (for example) requires or admits of "registration," a second needs "recording," to a third enrolment is essential; but of these acts, the two latter can only be effected in a Court of Record.

With this result it seems scarcely necessary to remark that the name of the Registrar is quite unconnected: whether the officer having charge of the records of our Court retain in that department, that name, or be termed Prothonotary only, can obviously not affect this matter.

We should observe that we do not mean that the Legislature may not render the registering or entry of any instrument in the Office of Registrar of Deeds, equivalent to recording or enrolment, as the case may require, but we can conceive no adequate reason for such a provision.

The case of Crown Grants of Land, perhaps, as intimately affecting all titles, may be thought an exception, and it might unquestionably be convenient to register such instruments, or a copy or memorial thereof, in the same office with other deeds; but this end might be attained simply, and in a better way, by requiring registration of the Memorial, in other words, an Abstract of the Grant, in a form to be prescribed. We think, too, that this might be accomplished without an increase of expense to the parties, as the fee of five shillings is quite equal to the cost of effecting both operations. But an additional fee of 2s. 6d. on such Memorial, we should apprehend would not be objectionable.

We would suggest a clause, in any Act on this subject, to the effect, that the enrolment or entering on record in the proper office of the Supreme Court, of any Crown Grant, or instrument purporting so to be, whether there entered actually on the roll or in any book used for that purpose, shall be evidence of such grant for all purposes.

The duties of the Prothonotary will be the following:

First—Those of Clerk of Arraigns, with charge of all records and papers, and the issue of all writs in the criminal department, not only of the Supreme Court, but of the Circuit Courts.

Secondly—Those of Master and Taxing Officer at Common Law; he will also compute principal and interest on bills of exchange and promissory notes. The Chief Clerk having hereafter the same powers in these respects, but in the absence of the Prothonotary only, as are now vested in the second clerk.

Thirdly—Those of Clerk of Enrolments: All Memorials, Copartnership Deeds, or Charters of Public Companies, Crown Grants, and other Deeds requiring enrolment, all Recognizances of Newspaper Proprietors and others, of all Acts of Council to be entered and to be kept by him.

Fourthly—He will also attend all sittings of the full Court, in term, or on appeals, or otherwise; and all rules of Court, or orders, the result of any such sitting, will be accordingly issued by him.

Fifthly—He will exercise also a general superintendence over the clerks in the common law department, and daily receive from them the amount of their collections of fees, for which he will accordingly be responsible. The Chief Clerk will report also to him, in the first instance, on subjects requiring any direction.

Sixthly—That returns of, and orders issued to, the Collector of Intestate Estates, will be filed and exhibited in his office. The abstracts will be made out there, and he will likewise prepare all returns at any time required from the Court, such only as relate to Equity business excepted.

Seventhly—All writs, and other business in the Exchequer jurisdiction of the Court, will be issued from, and transacted, at his office.

These appropriations of duty may hereafter be changed or modified. But as a detail of the various distinct branches of duty, to be divided between our different officers, our communication will still be useful, for purposes of reference on future occasions.

The Chief Clerk will, except in the particulars mentioned above, retain the management of the Common Law business; all actions being commenced and carried on in his office. In the absence of the Prothonotary, he will tax costs in undefended causes, and compute interest on bills and notes, as now done by the Second Clerk; all process in actions will be solely issued by this officer, as at present. He will also, by himself, or one of the clerks in his department, attend all sittings for causes, whether before Assessors or Juries.

The Chief Clerk's duties, therefore, will be still very onerous, and the revenue received by him will continue larger than in any other office. But as the arrangements proposed will relieve him from much responsibility and some labour, we are of opinion that his present rate of salary may be reduced from £550 to £400.

For the same reason we recommend a reduction of the second clerk's salary, from £350 to £250 per annum.

One department of duty, and that not an unimportant one, remains to be noticed, namely, so much of the Ecclesiastical as relates to the issue of Probates and Letters of Administration.

This, since the larger portion of the department, that is to say, the collection of intestates' effects is to be transferred to the Master, we think should be transferred also to that officer. But in the mean time, until a decision be made as to the separation of the jurisdiction elsewhere advised by us, we must devolve these duties on the Prothonotary.

In reference to that arrangement for the separation of the Common Law from the Equity, Bankruptcy, and Ecclesiastical Jurisdictions, it is important to observe, that each of these transfers is a natural step to its adoption.

The Collector of Intestates' Effects being the Master in Equity, its supervision and control naturally devolve on the Primary Judge in Equity. But the duty thus cast on him, with the increasing duties of the Equity Jurisdiction, will soon compel a division of Judicial duties generally, which can be advantageously effected on no other plan than the one above adverted to.

We have the honour to be, Sir,
Your Excellency's obedient humble Servants,

(Signed) JAMES DOWLING, C.J.

ALFRED STEPHEN.

To the Chief Justice.
Colonial Secretary's Office, Sydney,
September 5, 1843.

Sir,—I am directed by His Excellency the Governor to acknowledge the receipt of the letter addressed to him by their Honors the Judges of the Supreme Court, on the 17th of last month; and with reference to the interview which he had on Tuesday last with your Honor, and one of your learned colleagues (Mr. Justice Stephen), His Excellency desires me to make the following observations:—

His Excellency is happy to find, that so far as regards the separation of the Registrar's Office from the Office of the Supreme Court, there is little or no difference of opinion between their Honors and himself, it being matter of indifference to His Excellency whether the new officer be called "Registrar-General," "Registrar of the Colony," or simply "Registrar of Deeds."

The Governor is also happy to find, that there is no difference of opinion in respect to the office of chief clerk, the Judges having taken the precaution to stipulate with the gentleman now holding that office, that his salary should be reduced to £400 a-year, whenever the office of Prothonotary might be created.

With respect to the duties with which the Prothonotary is to be charged, His Excellency has no desire in any way to interfere, they being matters which fall legitimately under the control of the Judges; and the only point he has laboured to establish being, that there shall be no officers in the Supreme Court except the Master, Sheriff, and Prothonotary, in the receipt of salaries above four hundred pounds a year.

In respect to the separation of duties alluded to as having been elsewhere recommended by their Honors, Sir George Gipps feels it right, however, candidly to state, that he has not felt himself at liberty to recommend to the Secretary of State a separation, which would involve the necessity of the appointment of a fourth Judge.

I have, &c.,
(Signed) E. DEAS THOMSON.

LAW INTELLIGENCE

SUPREME COURT.—Civil Side.

Friday.

Before their Honors the three Judges, in Banco.

DUGUID v. HOBLER.

This was an argument on demurrer. The plaintiff in the suit being Leslie Duguid, the Managing Director of the Commercial Banking Company, and the defendant, the Chairman of the Hunter's River Auction Company. The action had been brought against the defendant in his corporate capacity as Chairman of the above Company, and judgment having been obtained, a writ of scire facias was issued against several other parties holding shares in the said Company. The pleas put in by these parties were various, but their substance was—first, that their names had been erroneously placed on the list of shareholders for the purpose of rendering them liable; and secondly, that the judgment, although obtained against the Company by the plaintiff, had been duly satisfied by one Cyrus Michael Doyle, a shareholder in such company, and that the writ of scire facias was not issued by the plaintiff with a view of recovering the amount of his judgment, but in consequence of a collusion between him and the said Cyrus Michael Doyle, by which the latter would be enabled to compel a contribution from the defendants toward the assets of the Company, notwithstanding any equities to the contrary that might exist between him and them. A further plea made by Mr. H. I. Pilcher, of Maitland, one of the defendants, was that he had ceased to be a member of the Company for some time past, having advertised his intention to do so in due form. These pleas had been demurred to on the ground of insufficiency.

Mr. Windeyer appeared in support of the demurrer, and contended that under the provisions of the Act of Council, by which the above Company was incorporated, the plaintiff was fully justified in taking the steps which had been adopted in this suit. The charge of collusion or fraud was not maintainable, for as it was not attempted to impeach the judgment, the plaintiff was obviously entitled to dispose of his interest under that judgment for the purpose of securing himself from all risk, and having done so to the said C. M. Doyle, might continue to press the writ of scire facias for the protection of the latter, without the slightest imputation of having fraudulent intentions. With reference to the plea of Mr. Pilcher, he contended that the fact of that gentleman having advertised himself out of the Company would not release him from his liability to all persons having claims which had accrued previous to the time of his retirement.

Mr. Broadhurst appeared on the other side, and addressed the Court at considerable length in support of the allegations contained in the above pleas, contending that the plaintiff was precluded from prosecuting the matter as the agent of C. M. Doyle, by whom the judgment had been satisfied, and that persons who had retired from the Company at the time the action was brought could not be held liable, the intent of the Act being to render the shareholders for the time being the parties so amenable.

The Court postponed its decision.

MACLAREN v. BOUCHER.

This was a proceeding upon a Writ of Foreign Attachment issued against the defendant, as the Agent of the British and Australasian Bank, the garnishees being Messrs. Walker and Co.

Mr. Windeyer handed in a return made by the officers of the Court upon the precept issued in this case, directing him to proceed with two competent persons to the stores of the garnishees for the purpose of inspecting and appraising certain bales of cloth and cases of haberdashery alleged to be in their possession belonging to the defendant. The return stated that on applying to the storekeeper and clerks of Messrs. Walker no information as to the position of the goods in question could be obtained, and Mr. Thomas Walker had, upon being addressed on the subject, declined to give any such information. After the return had been read, the learned gentleman stated that he would proceed to call some witnesses, from whom he anticipated he should be able to obtain sufficient information to enable the Court to sanction further proceedings. He then called

Thomas Bolsover, storekeeper to Messrs. Walker and Co., who stated his recollection of some cases marked "J. R., Leeds," with a diamond, having been brought into the store, one of which cases was still there.

Robert Waterston, clerk to Messrs. Walker was also called, and produced an account current between that firm and the British and Australasian Bank, by which the balance appeared to be in favour of the former. He also stated that some of the cloth and haberdashery received on account of the Bank was still in the stores of the firm.

Mr. Windeyer submitted that he had given prima facie proof of the possession of certain goods belonging to the defendant, and applied for an order of this Court, directing Messrs. Walker to sell these goods, and pay the proceeds of such sale into Court, to be appropriated as their Honors might afterwards determine.

Mr. Thomas Walker stated to the Court that he believed the goods alluded to were not the property of the Bank, but merely of some persons to whom advances had been made.

The Chief Justice enquired whether Mr. Walker was in a position to prove that fact by the evidence either of himself on oath, or of any other person.

Mr. Walker said that he knew himself only what he had heard, but he believed the clerk who had already been examined, could give evidence as to this fact.

Mr. Waterston was then recalled, but it appeared that what he knew upon the subject was from the perusal of a letter, which had been brought to the Court, the evidence was inadmissible.

The Court therefore granted the order applied for by Mr. Windeyer, making it returnable in a fortnight from that date.

Some motions of course and other business of minor importance were then disposed of, and the Court adjourned till to-day.

NEW INSOLVENTS.

The following estates were surrendered yesterday.—

Robert Lord, of Botany, merchant, by petition. No schedule filed.

Tamillas Mappin and Benjamin Price, carrying on business under the firm and style of T. Mappin and Co., of George-street, Sydney, cutlers. The schedule in this estate is still in the Sheriff's Office.

Court of Vice Admiralty.—This Court was opened pro forma yesterday afternoon before his Honor the Chief Justice, but as there was no business before it, was immediately adjourned till ten o'clock A.M., on Wednesday next.

Police Court Business.—This Court was opened yesterday by the Mayor at [illegible] o'clock: there were seven general charges, nine on the drunkard list, and sixteen summons cases. The whole were disposed of as follows:—One drunkard was ordered to pay 5s. or go to the stocks for two hours; [illegible] paid 11s.; one was sent 24 hours to the [illegible] for non-payment of a like fine; four were sent to the mill for 12 hours each for non-payment of a like sum; Charles O'Neil and M[illegible] Mahony for non-payment of a guinea each were sent to the cells for 48 hours. [illegible] free list: Edward Wilson, for an assault, [illegible] discharged; William Madigan, a boy, [illegible] an assault on another boy named Charles Stewart, was also discharged; Susan [illegible] for stealing, was also discharged; [illegible] Barber, for being illegally on Mr. Aspinall's premises, sent one month to the treadmill; Timothy Reardon, for robbery and assault on a constable, remanded; William Young, an assault, bound to the peace, himself in [illegible] and two sureties in £10 each; Mahomed, a native of Calcutta, for exposing his person, and attempting to commit an assault, striking at a fish dealer with an axe, in the market, and afterwards drawing a knife on the same man—the prisoner being a repeated offender, was remanded till to-day. While this prisoner was in the cell, with Reardon and some other prisoners, as the Court was closing, Reardon drew a knife and struck him in the throat, in such way as to render the life of Mahomed very problematical. The other prisoners rescued the namesake of the prophet, and on the alarm being given, a number of the constables entered the cell, secured Reardon, and placed him in custody till to-day. It appears the prisoner Reardon is insane. Several of the constabulary have been put on the report for not having taken the knife from him when he was searched. The only account Reardon gives of the matter is, that he had the knife with him as no constable in Sydney could find it. The summons list contained one case for support of an illegitimate child, and two cases of deserting wives, all postponed for a month. Mary Simpson and two others, for an assault on Ellen Wickham, each bound to the peace in £20, with sureties to the amount of £10. Breaches of the Building Act: one dismissed, and two fined five shillings each, with ten shillings costs. Breaches of the Police Act—three cases: one fined [illegible] five shillings, and the other two fined [illegible] five shillings, with five shillings costs. Breaches of the peace: Mrs. Connors, at the instance of Ann Conway, bound to keep the peace, herself in £10, and two sureties [illegible] in £5. Alexander M'Culien, for an assault, fined £4, with 6s. costs, or one month [illegible] All the other cases were either postponed or dismissed.

Horse-stealing.—A few days ago, Byrne, the watch-house-keeper and district constable at Concord, apprehended a man named S[illegible] ton, with several horses in his possession, supposed to have been stolen. The case is under investigation before the Bench at Parramatta.

New Work.—The following advertisement appears in the May London papers:—Nearly ready, in 8vo., Australia and the East: being a Narrative of a Voyage to New South Wales in an Emigrant Ship; with a residence of some months in Sydney and the Bush, and the Route Home by way of India and Egypt, in the Years 1841-2. By John Hood, Esq., of Stoneridge, Berwickshire. John Murray, Albemarle-street.

Erratum.—The decision of the Court relative to the detention of Messrs. Foss and Lloyd's title deeds by Mr. Norton, on account of a lien, accruing out of a claim by him against one of the partners, was not that the deeds should be delivered up, as reported in our paper of yesterday, but that the application should be dismissed on each party paying his own costs; their Honors being of opinion that Mr. Norton's lien could not be interfered with by a proceeding of this description.

Bourke Ward.—The addition of the name of Mr. Hercules Watt, to Mr. Blackman's Committee, came too late to be inserted in its proper place.

COMMERCIAL INTELLIGENCE.

The sales during the week have been trifling in the extreme, and no improvement is manifested in any department of business.

Wheat and Flour.—These articles remain without any alteration. The accounts from Van Diemen's Land speak of the appearance of a most abundant crop throughout the island, and the market for wheat dull in the extreme.

Provisions of all kinds are quite neglected.

Tea.—Hysonskin: The price is without any alteration; although the amount of business has been small, the holders remain firm at last quotation.

Sugar.—The dullness that was noticed last week in this market maintains its influence, and the transactions have been very limited; one sale of fair quality has been made at £12 per ton; the sales during the week have been barely fifty tons.

Coffee.—Scarcely any demand exists.

Tobacco.—The demand is but small, at the same time there is none offering upon easier terms, and no transactions have taken place; the few holders show no disposition to realise under present rates.

Cigars.—The trade show little or no desire to purchase at present rates.

B. P. Rum.—But few sales have been made during the week, and these have been confined to small parcels only, chiefly in hogsheads, at 3s. 6d. to 3s. 8d. per gallon, from 6 to 10 O. P.

Brandy.—This market yet remains dull, though more enquiry has been made during the week for Martell's and Hennessy's, but no sales are reported.

Case Gin, from the constant arrivals, has ceased to be enquired after, and a decline may be anticipated.

Foreign Rum and Arrack.—No demand whatever exists.

Wines.—Cape Company's brand remains firm at £10 per pipe, at which rate sales have been made.

In other articles the demand and sales have been very trifling.

ORIGINAL CORRESPONDENCE.

EMPLOYMENT OF MECHANICS.

To the Editors of the Sydney Morning Herald.

Gentlemen,—In your report of the debates, I think I may understand that the Legislative Council proposes to sanction the expenditure of a sum of money, for the purpose of employing the mechanics now wanting work in Sydney. Would it not confer great advantage on some places in the interior to employ them on public works at distant towns, where these workmen may ultimately locate themselves? Such a measure would have the effect of distributing families—also of probably completing works already begun, and what is of real importance, circulating a little money where there is an inconvenient scarcity. In a late report it appeared that there were sixteen Churches in an unfinished state, several School-houses, and Parsonages, the works of which were all suspended for want of funds; besides these there are Presbyterian Churches, Roman Catholic Chapels, School-houses, &c.; also, some Court-houses, the prison at Maitland, and indeed many other public works in different parts of the colony, which, if not proceeded with, must become in a course of deterioration, and really incur both particular and general loss to the whole colony.

I would, therefore, submit that the sum proposed for the employment of mechanics should be distributed for the carrying on every work of utility. Suppose there are forty or fifty buildings waiting for funds, and they were assisted with from £50 to £300 each, according to the magnitude of the work, it may not be doubted but that £10,000 thus expended would divert workmen from Sydney, where they are too thick upon the ground, and employ all who could be spared from that City. Some works would be completed, others advanced, industry promoted, the country districts improved, and the whole community would derive benefit. If the finances of the government will not admit of such a sum being distributed as a gift, it may be employed as a loan, and the District Councils as constituted could repay in a short period. I would not intrude this upon public notice, but at the present crisis even simple suggestions may be beneficial, and it becomes a duty to anticipate and prevent causes of discontent and murmur for the want of employment.

ENGLISH EXTRACTS.

BANKING.

(From the Morning Chronicle, June 28.)

Considerable attention has been directed to a remarkable dictum of Lord Abinger, delivered by that learned Judge in the recent case of "Richards v. Mackay," tried before his lordship and a common jury. The action was raised on a promissory note for £100, given by the defendant, by way of security, to the London and Westminster Bank. It transpired in the course of the proceedings that the defendant had been a shareholder in the Marylebone Bank, and that he had been induced to give this note as a collateral security to the London and Westminster Bank for advances made to the Marylebone Bank, on condition of having the note returned if the advances stipulated for were not made. The note had been indorsed to the plaintiff, and the defence set up was that the London and Westminster Bank did not make the advance in due performance of agreement; that no value was given for the note by the London and Westminster Bank, who had indorsed it over to the plaintiff; that the advances actually made by the London and Westminster Bank had been repaid before the note became due; and that it had been endorsed to the plaintiffs after it became due, without the authority of the defendant. There was some discrepancy in the pleas adduced for the defendant, inasmuch as they maintained in part that the advances conditioned for had not been made, but also that they had not only been made, but actually repaid. It was, in fact, proved, and so the jury found by their verdict, that the money advanced had been repaid before the note fell due, and that it should thereupon have been returned to the defendant, but a verdict seems to have been found for plaintiff on the third plea, which stated that the advances had not been made; leave, however, being given to the counsel for the defendant to have the verdict entered for his client on that plea also. The remarkable dictum delivered by Lord Abinger on this trial occurred during the examination of a witness of the name of Augustus Boat, who had also been a shareholder in the Marylebone Bank, a concern which, as justly remarked by a correspondent, "though it continued for some time to bear the name of a bank, never had sufficient business to produce a remunerative profit, its dividends being paid out of its very slender subscribed capital." During the examination of this witness our report contains the following account of what passed:—

"Lord Abinger: Pray, did the Marylebone Bank profess to give interest to their customers?—Witness: Yes, my lord.

"Lord Abinger, addressing the jury, said he hoped this case would be a warning to them, and induce them, as well as other persons, never to employ a London bank which professed to allow interest to its customers for their money. The system was extremely bad, and must in the end, in most cases, if not in every one of them, tend to ruin."

The private bankers in London never allow interest of any amount whatever on deposits, while the London joint-stock banks allow their customers, who have deposit accounts over a certain sum, a specific rate of interest, which may stated at from 2 to 2½ per cent. Lord Abinger has volunteered his advice to the public never to employ any of these joint-stock banks. Not only so, but he condemns their system altogether, and predicts "that in the end the whole of them, at least in most cases, if not in every one of them, tend to ruin."

This is equivalent to an advice to the public to withdraw their deposits, now amounting to a very large sum, from the joint stock banks. It is a debatable question certainly, whether or not the London joint-stock banks might not have done better if they had refused to allow interest on deposit accounts. Their allowance of interest on these accounts is part and parcel of the Scotch system of banking, which has been engrafted upon the English plan, and its maintenance must, no doubt, have crippled profits during the great abundance of money which has prevailed during the whole of this year in the London market; but notwithstanding that difficulty, the recent reports of the annual meetings of various London joint-stock banks show, that in spite of the great depression in trade with which they have had to grapple, and the very low value of money, their business has been lucrative, their deposits have accumulated, and their influence has steadily increased.

The Shepherds of New Castile.—I sat down in the venta where I put up; there was a huge fire, consisting of the greater part of the trunk of an olive-tree; the company was rather miscellaneous: a hunter with his escopeta; a brace of shepherds with immense dogs, of that species for which Estremadura is celebrated; a broken soldier, just returned from the wars; and a beggar, who, after demanding charity por las siete llagas de Maria Santissima, took a seat amongst us, and made himself quite comfortable. The hostess was an active bustling woman, and busied herself in cooking my supper, which consisted of the game which I had purchased at Jaraicejo, and which, on my taking leave of the gipsy, he had counselled me to take with me. In the mean time, I sat by the fire, listening to the conversation of the company. "I would I were a wolf," said one of the shepherds; "or, indeed, anything rather than what I am. A pretty life is this of ours, out in the campo, among the carascales, suffering heat and cold for a peseta a day. I would I were a wolf; he fares better, and is more respected than the wretch of a shepherd." "But he frequently fares scurvily," said I; "the shepherd and dogs fall upon him, and then he pays for his temerity with the loss of his head." "That is not often the case, senor traveller," said the shepherd; "he watches his opportunity, and seldom runs into harm's way. And as to the attacking him, it is no very pleasant task; he has both teeth and claws, and dog or man, who has once felt them, likes not to venture a second time within his reach. These dogs of mine will seize a bear singly with considerable alacrity, though he is a most powerful animal; but I have seen them run howling away from a wolf, even though there were two or three of us at hand to encourage them." "A dangerous person is the wolf," said the other shepherd; "and cunning as dangerous; who knows more than he? He knows the vulnerable point of every animal; see for example, how he flies at the neck of a bullock, tearing open the veins with his grim teeth and claws. But does he attack a horse in this manner? I trow not." "Not he," said the other shepherd, "he is too good a judge; but he fastens on the haunches, and hamstrings him in a moment. O, the fear of a horse when he comes near the dwelling of the wolf! My master was the other day riding in the desplobado, above the pass, on his fine Andalusian steed, which had cost him five hundred dollars; suddenly the horse stopped, and sweated and trembled like a woman in the act of fainting; my master could not conceive the reason, but presently he heard a squealing and growling in the bushes, whereupon he fired off his gun and scared the wolves, who scampered away; but he tells me that the horse has not yet recovered from his fright." "Yet the mares know occasionally how to balk him," replied his companion; "there is great craft and malice in mares, as there is in all females; see them feeding in the campo with their young cria about them; presently the alarm is given that the wolf is drawing near; they start wildly, and run about for a moment, but it is only for a moment,—amain, they gather together, forming themselves into a circle, in the centre of which they place the foals. Onward comes the wolf, hoping to make his dinner on horse-flesh; he is mistaken, however; the mares have balked him, and are as cunning as himself: not a tail is to be seen—not a hinder quarter—but there stand the whole troop, their fronts towards him ready to receive him, and as he runs round them barking and howling, they rise successively on their hind legs, ready to stamp him to the earth, should he attempt to hurt their cria or themselves." "Worse than the he-wolf," said the soldier, "is the female, for as the senor pastor has well observed, there is more malice in women than in males, to see one of these she-demons with a troop of the males at her heels is truly surprising: where she turns they turn, and what she does that do they; for they appear bewitched, and have no power but to imitate her actions. I was once travelling with a comrade over the hills of Galicia, when we heard a howl. 'Those are wolves,' said my companion, 'let us get out of the way;' so we stepped from the path and ascended the side of the hill a little way, to a terrace, where grew vines, after the manner of Galicia: presently appeared a large grey she-wolf, deshonesta, snapping and growling at a troop of demons, who followed close behind, their tails uplifted, and their eyes like firebrands. What do you think the perverse brute did? Instead of keeping to the path, she turned in the very direction in which we were; there was now no remedy, so we stood still. I was the first upon the terrace, and by me she passed so close that I felt her hair brush against my legs; she however took no notice of me, but pushed on, neither looking to the right nor left, and all the other wolves trotted by me without offering the slightest injury or even so much as looking at me. Would that I could say as much for my poor companion, who stood farther on, and was, I believe, less in the demon's way than I was; she had nearly passed him when suddenly she turned round and snapped at him. I shall never forget what followed: in a moment a dozen wolves were upon him, tearing him limb from limb, with howlings like nothing in this world; in a few minutes he was devoured, nothing remaining but the skull and a few bones; and then they passed on in the same manner as they came. Good reason had I to be grateful that my lady wolf took less notice of me than my poor comrade."—Borrow's Bible in Spain.

A Novelty from Affghanistan.—Among the numerous trophies from the ancient seat of war in the east, one of the most curious that has yet reached us is a bear (ursus Thibetanus) lately presented to the Surry Zoological Gardens, by Captain Alexander. It was captured when quite a cub by an officer of the 40th, in the celebrated Khyber Pass, and has since shared with his captor all the vicissitudes of war, imprisonment, and victory. The only other individual of these species that has been seen alive in this country was a tenant of the Tower menagerie, about eighteen years ago, and was afterwards sent to the King of Holland. It is the rarest of the ursine family, and differs in many important respects from its congeners, having a remarkably thick neck, flat head, and large ears. The claws are particularly weak, and not more than half the length of those of the other two species of bears known in India. The conformation of the body is heavy and massive, clothed with a thick close fur of a glossy jet black in all parts, except a most singular-looking white patch under the throat, exactly resembling in shape the letter Y. In India it is considered to be ferocious in its habits, but that description does not apply to this specimen, which is very inoffensive, and fond of play after his rough fashion. He feeds on bread and fruits, and cannot be induced to touch meat either raw or cooked.

Extraordinary Dismissal of a Captain of the Army.—Captain Stanton, of the 1st Royal Tower Hamlets Militia, has been recently dismissed from the service, and re-instated during the present week, under the following extraordinary circumstances:—In the month of December last, a man named Henry Stanton, alias Dr. Winkworth, alias Palmer, was convicted at the Central Criminal Court, and sentenced to be transported for life, for stealing two watches, valued at £35, the property of Mr. Menzies, jeweller, of Clerkenwell. The case created unusual interest from the fact of the prisoner having married several respectable females, and made away with their property; in addition to which he had been previously transported, but got a remission of his sentence in consequence of stating that he had some years since given important information to the government respecting Ireland. The prisoner also stated that he had been an officer in the army, and that he in the year 1830 offered himself to represent the borough of Southampton. The matter reaching the ears of Lieutenant Colonel Grant, the commandant of the above regiment, he was anxious to ascertain whether the Captain Stanton belonging to his regiment, was one and the same person, and sent an officer, in company of the relieving overseer of Hackney, of which parish the captain was formerly one of the overseers, to Newgate, for that purpose. On their arrival they were shown the prisoner, but neither of them spoke to him; they, however, stated he was the man. In consequence of this, a communication was forwarded to the War Office, and Captain Stanton was dismissed from the service. At this time Captain Stanton was residing at Brigg, in Lincolnshire, and received his half pay from the branch of Messrs. Prescott, but upon applying he was greatly astonished on being told that the person he represented himself to be had been transported for life. On receiving this intelligence Captain Stanton wrote to the authorities at the War Office; and he subsequently received a letter requesting his attendance in London for the purpose of being identified. This has been done to the satisfaction of the Duke of Wellington, Sir Henry Hardinge, &c.; and the captain has not only been re-instated, but an apology made to him for the painful situation in which he had been placed.

Taking the Veil in Mexico.—Some days ago, having received message from my nun that a girl was about to take the veil in her convent, I went there about six o'clock, and knowing that the church on these occasions is apt to be crowded to suffocation, I proceeded to the reja, and speaking to an invisible within, requested to know in what part of the church I could have a place; upon which a voice replied—"Hermanita, (my sister), I am rejoiced to see you. You shall have a place beside the godmother." "Many thanks, Hermanita. Which way shall I go?" Voice: "You shall go through the sacristy. José Maria!" José Maria, a thin, pale, lank individual, with hollow cheeks, who was standing near like a page in waiting, sprang forward—"Madrecita, I am here!" Voice: "José Maria, that lady is the Senora de C——n. You will conduct her Excellency to the front of the grating, and give her a chair." After I had thanked the voice for her kindness in attending to me on a day when she was so much occupied with other affairs, the obsequious José Maria led the way, and I followed him through the sacristy into the church, where there were already a few kneeling figures; and thence into the railed-off enclosure destined for the relatives of the future nun, where I was permitted to sit down in a comfortable velvet chair. I had been there but a little while when the aforesaid José Maria reappeared, picking his steps as if he were walking upon eggs in a sick room. He brought me a message from the Madre —— that the nun had arrived, and that the Madrecita wished to know if I should like to give her an embrace before the ceremony began. I therefore followed my guide back into the sacristy, where the future nun was seated beside her godmother, and in the midst of her friends and relations, about thirty in all. She was arrayed in pale blue satin, with diamonds, pearls, and a crown of flowers. She was literally smothered in blond and jewels; and her face was flushed, as well it might be, for she had passed the day in taking leave of her friends at a fete they had given her, and had then, according to custom, been paraded through the town in all her finery. And now her last hour was at hand. When I came in, she rose and embraced me with as much cordiality as if we had known each other for years. Beside her sat the Madrina, also, in white satin and jewels; all the relations being likewise decked out in their finest array. The nun kept laughing every now and then in the most unnatural and hysterical manner, as I thought, apparently to impress us with the conviction of her perfect happiness: for it is a great point of honour amongst girls similarly situated to look as cheerful and gay as possible. * * * This girl was very young, but by no means pretty; on the contrary, rather disgraciée par la nature; and perhaps a knowledge of her own want of attractions may have caused the world to have few charms for her. But José Maria cut short my train of reflections, by requesting me to return to my seat before the crowd arrived, which I did forthwith. Shortly after, the church-doors were thrown open, and a crowd burst in, every one struggling to obtain the best seat. Musicians entered, carrying desks and music-books, and placed themselves in two rows, on either side of the enclosure where I was. Then the organ struck up its solemn psalmody, and was followed by the gay music of the band. Rockets were let off outside the church, and at the same time, the Madrina and all the relations entered and knelt down in front of the grating which looks into the convent, but before which hung a dismal black curtain. I left my chair and knelt down beside the godmother. Suddenly the curtain was withdrawn, and the picturesque beauty of the scene within baffles all description. Beside the altar, which was in a blaze of light, was a perfect mass of crimson and gold drapery; the walls, the antique chairs, the table before which the priests sat, all hung with the same splendid material. The Bishop wore his superb mitre and robes of crimson and gold; the attendant priests also glittering in crimson and gold embroidery. In contrast to these, five-and-twenty figures, entirely robed in black from head to foot, were ranged on each side of the room prostrate, their faces touching the ground, and in their hands immense lighted tapers. On the foreground was spread a purple carpet, bordered round with a garland of freshly-gathered flowers, roses and carnations and heliotrope, the only things that looked real and living in the whole scene; and in the middle of this knelt the novice, still arrayed in her blue satin, white lace veil and jewels, and also with a great lighted taper in her hand. The black nuns then rose and sang a hymn, every now and then falling on their faces and touching the floor with their foreheads. The whole looked like an incantation, or a scene in Robert le Diable. The novice was then raised from the ground and led to the feet of the bishop, who examined her as to her vocation and gave her his blessing, and once more the black curtain fell between us and them. In the second act, she was lying prostrate on the floor, disrobed of her profane dress, and covered over with a black cloth, while the black figures kneeling round her chanted a hymn. She was now dead to the world. The sunbeams had faded away, as if they would not look upon the scene, and all the light was concentrated in one great mass upon the convent group. Again she was raised. All the blood had rushed into her face, and her attempt at a smile was truly painful. She then knelt before the bishop and received the benediction, with the sign of the cross, from a white hand with a pastoral ring. She then went round alone to embrace all the dark phantoms as they stood motionless, and as each dark shadow clasped her in its arms, it seemed like the dead welcoming a new arrival in the shades. * * * When the sermon was concluded, the music struck up—the heroine of the day came forward, and stood before the grating to take her last look at this wicked world. Down fell the black curtain. Up rose the relations, and I accompanied them into the sacristy. Here they coolly lighted their cigars, and very philosophically discoursed upon the exceeding good fortune of the new-made nun, and on her evident delight and satisfaction with her own situation. As we did not follow her behind the scenes, I could not give my opinion on this point. Shortly after, one of the gentlemen civilly led me to my carriage, and so it was.—Life in Mexico.

Death of Mr. Murray, the Publisher.—We regret to announce the death of Mr. Murray, the eminent publisher, which took place yesterday morning, at his house in Albemarle-street. Mr. Murray had been for some time unwell, but the symptoms did not excite any alarm in his family until Friday last. Literature and society generally have sustained a loss by the death of this estimable gentleman. In private life Mr. Murray was beloved by all who knew him, and in kindness of heart, warmth of hospitality, and sincerity of friendship, has left few equals. As a publisher his name is associated with those of all the most eminent men who have adorned the literature of the present century—many of them still alive to lament his loss, and many of them gone before him, leaving reputations which, living, he did all that enlightened enterprise and the noblest liberality could do to foster, and for which his reward will be a fame as lasting, if not so splendid, as their own. In after ages the name of Byron pre eminently, and of Scott, Southey, Moore, and a host of others almost as illustrious, will not fail to excite the remembrance of the publisher who first gave their productions to the world, who lived with them on terms of intimacy and friendship, and who rewarded their genius more substantially than bookseller ever rewarded genius before. Mr. Murray was, we believe, in his 65th year, and had been in business, as a publisher, first in the Strand, and afterwards in Albemarle-street, for upwards of forty years.—Morning Chronicle, June 28.

Mis-spelling.—Few words are so often erroneously spelt as those ending in y or ey, when they change their form, as when the singular noun becomes plural, or the verb in the first person is changed to the second. In an advertisement of a work on arithmetic, I lately saw "monies!" and we frequently see "attornies," "vallies," &c., an error which can only be matched by "follys," "ponys," "jellys," &c. The proper rule is very simple: y following a consonant, requires ies; ey requires only the addition of s. Hence attorney, attorneys; valley, valleys; money, moneys; survey, surveys; and also, pony, ponies; folly, follies; carry, carries, &c. These are correct, and the difference may be easily remembered.

Adventures of a Bandit.—A letter of the 16th ult., from Hamburgh, in the Poste Ampt Gazette of Frankfort, says:—"Schubry, the noted Hungarian bandit chief, of whom such extraordinary accounts were published some years ago, and who was believed to have been at last killed in a conflict with the troops, is not dead, but made his escape to Hamburgh, where he lived unknown until the spring of 1838, whence he embarked for America, and established a pharmacy, under the name of Papp, which is his real name, and continues to live there in peace and contentment. Before he accomplished this, however, he had great difficulties to contend with. When he reached New York he had no more than one dollar and a half in his pocket. He first obtained a place as a shopman with a gentleman grocer, and afterwards became a printer at Philadelphia. He next dealt in gilt rings, pins, and chains, and steel pens, by which he gained a great deal of money. He learned chemistry of Mr. Curtius, an apothecary at New York, and carried on the business at the Havanna, before he settled at Charlestown, where he has been very successful."

The Meat Market.—Legs were freely walked off, and there was a pressure on ribs owing to the rush of beggars; but knuckles came down, while calves' heads were looking up steadily. At Smithfield, there was a rush of bulls, but the transactions were of such a hazardous nature as to appear more like a toss up, than firm business. Any kind of security was resorted to, and the bulls having driven a well-known speculator into a corner, he was glad to get out as he could, though an attempt was made to pin him to his position. Pigs went on much at the old rates, and briskness could not be obtained, though the coupons were freely offered. The weather having been favourable to slaughtering, calves have not been brought to the pen,—but there is something doing in beef, for the 'last of the Barons' is advertised.—Punch.

Cooke and Wheatstone's Electro-Magnetic Telegraph.—The laying of the four wires of this line is now nearly completed from Paddington to Slough. The wires are now carried at about a height of eight feet in the open air, extended by posts at every forty or fifty feet. It will thus be much cheaper than even by the old plan. By this line the Court at Windsor will have ready communication with London, and allowing for time to reach the station, will be able, in a couple of hours, to summon to the Cabinet a minister from Downing-street. The success of this attempt will no doubt lead to the electro-magnetic telegraph being laid down on the Brighton line for the convenience of the pavilion, and thus gradually will the way be prepared for its earlier adoption as the general means of telegraphic communication, which sooner or later it must become. The opening of the Paris and Rouen Railway will render it a matter of necessity both to the English and French Governments to avail themselves of the electro-magnetic telegraph in communication between London and Paris, via Brighton and Southampton. We may further observe on this subject, that the electro-magnetic telegraph is to be laid down on the proposed Northampton and Peterborough Railway. Advices from the United States also affirm that a line is to be established from Washington to Baltimore under a grant from Congress.—Railway Magazine.

Lord Ellenborough and General Nott.—(Extract of a letter from India.)—General Nott seems a soldier and a gentleman. When the ceremony at Ferozepore was all over, Nott went, after breakfast, to call on Lord Ellenborough; and not having been admitted, he was going away, on leaving his card. Lord Ellenborough sent after and brought him back; and while Nott was standing in the tent, up came some one, and shook him warmly by both hands, saying, "I am delighted to see you, General Nott. This is one of the happiest moments of my life." Nott looked at him from right to left, but could not recognise him, as he replied, "Really, I am very glad to see you, whoever you are; but four years' absence from India have so changed the faces of my old friends, that at this moment I do not remember you." "Never mind, I am one of your friends; I am Lord Ellenborough."

A Refreshing Drink in a Fever.—Mix a pint of Irish whiskey with half a pint of green tea, add a squeeze of lemon and loaf sugar to the taste. The above dose to be taken every hour, until a change takes place in the patient.—Punch.

Foreign Intelligence.—The overland cab from Hounslow has arrived since our last, bringing letters up to the latest dates, and a passenger up to Piccadilly. The turnpike at Hammersmith was in possession of the British, who were selling to every one who passed in vehicles a letter of safe conduct. There was a dreadful variance between some of the district clocks, and on a show of hands being taken, the result was fearfully contradictory. At Brompton there seems a desire on the part of the inhabitants to cultivate friendly relations, for the people are flocking to the pawnbrokers, whom they address by the endearing title of uncle. The treaty between Chelsea and Battersea only waits for the signature of the beadle, who is taking six lessons of Mr. Carstairs. By the terms of the convention, Chelsea gives up nothing, and Battersea takes takes all that is thus ceded.—Punch.

Death of Lord Robert Ker.—It is with deep regret we have to announce the loss to Edinburgh of one of its most highly esteemed citizens, by the death of Lord Robert Ker, Assistant Adjutant General in Scotland, which melancholy event took place yesterday, at his Lordship's residence in Moray-place, after a confinement to the house of somewhat less than a fortnight. Lord Robert Ker was a Lieutenant-Colonel in the army, and K.H. He served in Portugal under General Cuyler, in 1798; in Minorca, under General Fox, in 1799 and 1800; in Egypt, under Sir Ralph Abercromby, in 1801, and was wounded in the leg at the battle of Alexandria, where the gallant general fell: and in the same year was present at the surrender of Cairo, and siege and surrender of Alexandria, under General (afterwards Lord) Hutchinson. In 1802-3 Lord Robert served in Malta and Gibraltar, and in Ireland in 1805, where he was aid-de-camp to Lord Cathcart, Commander of the Forces there. From 1806 to 1822 Lord Robert was military secretary to the Commander of the Forces in Scotland, and from that latter year up to his death was Assistant Adjutant General on the North British Staff. Lord Robert Ker was uncle to the late, and grand uncle to the present Marquis of Lothian. He has left a numerous family, to whom he was deeply endeared, as indeed, we may say, he was generally to all who knew him. Lord Robert was just 63 years of age, having been born in the year 1780.—Caledonian Mercury.

Colonel Chesney.—This celebrated traveller, who was employed in the Euphrates expedition, and several other important missions in Asia, has received orders to proceed to Hong Kong, as commanding officer of artillery. This gallant officer, who is an Irishman, will attain the rank of Major-General, when he assumes the command at Hong Kong. He will take out a detachment from the Royal Artillery, at Woolwich, to fill up the casualties in Major Greenword's company, at that station.

Nice Distinction.—The Editor of the Louisville Journal, speaking of a brother editor, makes the following nice distinction:—"I don't mean to call him a liar, although I must admit that he is a butcher of the truth and an assassin of facts."

Laconic.—A gentleman connected with a large mercantile establishment in this town wrote, it is said, to the Duke of Wellington on the subject of the projected inland bonding system, to which the gentleman in question is strongly opposed. A reply was received from his Grace in due course, and, it is rumoured, ran somewhat in the following words:—"The Duke of Wellington presents his compliments to Mr.——, and begs to inform him that with respect to the Inland Warehousing Bill, the government will do what they consider right, but they will not deem it necessary to consult Mr. —— on the subject."—Liverpool Albion.

MAIZE is at present very plentiful in the market. The best samples with difficulty realize 1s. 6d. per bushel, the retailers are charging from 2s. to 2s. 6d. per bushel.

OATS are plentiful, the prices given to the growers are from 1s. 9d. to 2s. 3d., the extreme retail prices are from 2s. 6d. to 3s.

BARLEY is neither offered nor enquired for. Common barley is from 2s. to 2s. 6d., and Cape from 2s. 6d to 3s. per bushel, wholesale; the retail prices are, common from 2s. 6d. to 3s., and Cape from 3s. to 3s. 6d. per bushel.

HAY.—During the week the average quality of the hay brought to market has been superior to that received since the beginning of the month; and, should dry weather continue, the experienced hay-curers are sanguine that the quality will still further improve. About sixty loads have paid dues. The prices have ranged, per load, from £3 15s. to £4 10s. per ton: the retail prices are from 4s. 6d. to 5s. 3d. per cwt.

STRAW.—Only five loads have been on sale; the prices have ranged per load from £1 10s. to £2 15s., being about from 30s. to 55s. per ton; the retail prices are about 3s. per cwt., and for the best quality 3s. 3d. per cwt. is asked.

GREEN STUFF.—About twenty loads have arrived during the week; the wholesale prices are from 6d. to 8d. per dozen; the retail charge is from 8d. to 10d. per dozen.

GREEN BEDDING.—Several loads have been received; the prices vary from 5s. to 7s. per load.

MILCH COWS.—None have been offered at the stand since the week began, but about thirty have changed owners among the dairymen, the prices given have been from 40s. to 65s.—these prices being regulated more by the pecuniary condition of the buyers and sellers than the intrinsic value of the cows.

FAT CATTLE.—There have been but few cattle of this description sold in Sydney since last report, and these in general were but indifferent. The prices given have been from 40s. to 60s. per head. As the wholesale butchers have bought up largely through their agents, it is probable that for several weeks to come the price of this description of stock in Sydney will be only nominal.

CALVES are not so plentiful as in the preceding week, but still the supply is fully equal to the demand; the prices have been from 3½d. to 4½d. per lb. on the carcase.

MIXED HERDS.—There have been none offered during the week, but several are on the road for Sydney market; the prices offered have not been more than 20s. per head, calves given in.

SHEEP.—It appears this market is at present overstocked, several head having changed hands at from 3s. 6d. to 4s. 6d. per head. The best unclipped will not realise more than 8s. 6d. per head. The average price of good wethers is about 5s. 9d per head.

HORSES of every description are plentiful, but no improvement has taken place in the demand since last report. The prices are merely nominal.

BUTCHERS' MEAT.—Beef and mutton from 1d. to 1½d. per lb., wholesale, and from 2d. to 3d. per lb. retail; veal is from 5d. to 5½d. per lb. by the carcass, and from 6d. to 7d. in small quantities; pork is from 5d. to 6d. per lb. by the quarter, and from 6d. to 7½d. per single lb.; roasting pigs are from 4s. to 5s. each; suet from 3d. to 4d. per lb.; lard, wholesale, from 4d. to 6d. per lb., and from 6d. to 9d. retail.

DAIRY PRODUCE.—There has been a very large supply of butter received during the week, but only a small portion of it has paid market dues. The prices given to the makers have been from 5½d. to 7½d. per lb. As there is a considerable quantity still on the hands of the settlers, unsold, there is reason to believe that for a week or two the wholesale price will not exceed 5d. per lb. The retail prices are—Glenlee, and other sorts of the best make, 1s. 6d. per lb.; salt butter, 1s. to 1s. 3d.; damaged ditto, 6d. to 10d. Colonial bacon, wholesale, is about 4d. per lb., but a considerable quantity has only realised 3½d. Colonial cheese is from 3½d. to 6d. per lb., wholesale, and from 8d. to 10d. retail. Colonial hams are selling, uncut, at from 7d. to 8d. per lb., and from 9d. to 10½d. by the single lb. Colonial salt pork is from 2½d. to 3d. per lb. by the barrel, and from 4d. to 5d. by the single lb.

POULTRY.—In consequence of the scarcity of money among the settlers, there has been a very large supply of poultry received during the week. One dealer gave 2s. 6d. per pair for about 160 head. The retail prices have been unaltered for the last month, and are as follows:—Fowls, from 3s. to 4s. per pair; ducks, 5s. to 6s. per pair; Muscovy ditto, 6s. to 8s. per pair; wild ducks, 4s. 6d. per brace; geese, 8s 6d. to 10s. 6d. per pair; turkeys, 11s. to 18s. per pair; teal, 3s. to 3s. 6d. per brace; pigeons, 2s. to 2s. 6d. per pair; eggs, 8d. to 10d. per dozen, the latter being the charge for such as are warranted.

VEGETABLES are abundant and of first-rate quality. The prices are—cucumbers, from 6d. to 1s. each, but the average price is 9d.; savoys are from 2d. to 6d. each; blue union peas, 1s. per peck, other sorts from 1s. to 1s. 6d; marrowfat beans, 1s. per peck, broad beans, 1s. 6d; cabbages, from 1s. to 8s. per dozen; carrots and turnips, from 2d. to 3d. per bunch; black Spanish radishes, 1d. per bunch; lettuces, 2½d. to 3½d. each; celery, 3d. to 6d. per stick; vegetable marrows, 3d. to 5d. each; pumpkins 3d. to 1s. each; water cresses, 2d. per plate; dried onions, 6d. to 8d. per lb., (supply very scarce); asparagus, 3d. to 4d. per bundle; beetroot, 4d. to 6d. per root; chillies, 6d. to 8d. per quart; love-apples, 1s. per dozen; rhubarb, 6d. per bundle; large flag leeks and young onions, 2d. per bunch. A few artichokes were on sale yesterday by Baptist at 2s. per dozen.

POTATOES.—There is a very large supply at present in Sydney; the prices are—the best colonial are from £4 to £5 per ton; retail, from 4s. 6d. to 6s. 6d. per cwt.; Van Diemen's Land potatoes are from £7 to £8 per ton, and retail from 8s. to 11s. per cwt.

FRUIT.—The supply has been large, but without variation as to species. The prices given to the growers have been from 6d. to 1s. 2d. per dozen for oranges. Retail prices:—Mandarin oranges, from 1s. to 1s. 6d. per dozen; Seville ditto, 1s. 3d. to 2s. 6d. per dozen; common lemons, 3½d. to 5d., wholesale and retail from 6d. to 9d. per dozen; Lisbon ditto, 1s. 6d. to 2s. 6d. per dozen; common oranges, 1s. 6d. to 3s. per dozen; citrons, 2s. per dozen; apples, 1s. to 2s. 3d. per dozen; loquats, 6d. to 9d. per quart; dried bananas, 1s. per packet; candied ditto, 1s. 6d. per lb.; native currants, 3d. to 4½d. per quart; strawberries, 1s. 6d. to 1s. 9d. per small plate; cocoanuts are from 4d. to 7d. each.

TIMBER.—This market remains as reported last week. Cedar, from 8s. to 10s. per hundred feet in log; Nanbuccra cedar is at from 10s. to 13s. per hundred feet in log when quantities are taken, but when a single log of the best quality is selected, the price is 14s. per hundred feet; cedar inch boards from 2d. to 2½d. per foot; hardwood, to complete buildings, is from 8s. to 10s. per hundred feet; laths, from 7s. to 8s. per thousand; and shingles, from 9s. to 10s. per thousand.

COALS AND FIREWOOD.—Coals per cargo are from 19s. to 22s. per ton, and delivered in the city from 20s. to 24s. per ton, according to distance from the wharf. Firewood from 4s. to 6s. per cart load, and from 18s. to 24s. per boat load, the price per barrowfull from 2s. to 2s. 3d. Coke 16s. per chaldron at the Gas Works, breeze 6s. per chaldron at the same place.

DECLINE OF SOCIALISM. — Robert Owen and a number of itinerant social lecturers, have just returned to London from a tour through the provinces, where they were endeavouring to disseminate their pestiferous doctrines. Their mission proved a signal failure, as they themselves confess that they were unable to enlist a single recruit for Harmony Hall, nothwithstanding that the most lying statements were put forward regarding the happiness, the comfort, and the independence of the few who are now constrained to be its inmates, and who, having been duped into the folly of sinking their little all in it, are unable, for want of means, to release themselves. Failing in their provincial tour, they have turned their attention to the metropolis, where they are holding meetings, under the pretence of discussing whether home colonisation or emigration is likely to ameliorate the condition of the working classes, while they seize the opportunity of ridiculing religion, morality, and the social ties. But here, as in the provinces, all the exertions of Owen and his satellites are likely to prove labour in vain, as they can with difficulty secure an auditory, and when they do so, the greatest part content themselves with laughing at the wild rhapsodies in which the orators indulge.

A CHARGE AGAINST SWIFT.—I found on one occasion, in the library of the Cura de Zipaquirà, a Spanish edition of Gulliver's Travels. An Aviso al Lector is prefixed, in which the Catholic reader is reminded that the work was written by a heretic Dean, which, the editor gravely observes, accounts for the many glaring and wilful deviations from truth to be found in these travels.—Venezuela.

A WOODEN CON.—Why is the wood pavement in the Poultry opposed to free trade?—Because it is formed on a sliding scale.

"My brethren," said an American preacher descanting on the difficulties of the sinner, "it is a very easy task to throw a skiff over the Niagara Falls, but a tremendous job to row it back again."
